Jean Monnet Module for European Monetary Law (MONELA) Academic Coordinator

[ 12/11/2020 – 11/11/2023 ]

Aim of the Module is acquiring and mastering specific theoretical and practical knowledge and skills on legal regulation of monetary relations of public law in the EU, the structure of monetary sovereignty and its evolution in monetary union (especially EMU), basic principles of material monetary law at the internal and extraterritorial level, sources, hybridisation tendency, and social justification of this discipline in the way to acquire specialised legal knowledge for the optimal resolution of monetary disputes in the European legal space. Through the research and study of the new legal discipline of Monetary Law in domestic jurisprudence, academia, and practice by following European requirements of systematic, comprehensive, multidisciplinary and consistent legal education, Module shall provide its contribution in development of domestic legal thought.

It is expected that by mastering the Jean Monnet module, course participants can successfully: 1) monitor, critically research and analyse both classical and contemporary trends in the legal regulation of EU monetary flows and policy; 2) competently, scientifically, and argumentatively discuss, research and present the results of their scientific work that will contribute to the development of scientific thought in the field of studying EU monetary law; 3) work on research, organisation and optimal monetary management, monetary advisory and similar activities that are covered by the content of the Jean Monnet module. In the indicated relations, with the appropriate supplementation of knowledge from other subjects, Module participants should be able to work on signing and implementation of international agreements and documents in the field of European monetary law and able to participate in the work of international monetary institutions.

The project team of the Jean Monnet module for European monetary law includes Prof. Dr. Srđan Golubović and Prof. Dr. Marko Dimitrijević (module coordinator).

The syllabus of the courses at bachelor, master and doctoral level of law studies will be deepened by issues in the field of European monetary law, by organising the following deliver-made courses in the form of lectures and training teaching activity:

- Fiscal Rules in the European Union (a course);
- Law of the European Central Bank (a course);
- Monetary Disputes and the European Court of Justice (training);
- Normative Regulation of European Economic Governance (a course).

PUBLICATIONS

International Monetary Law Institution, the scientific monograph of national importance, Nis: Faculty of Law, 2018, 300 pp. ISBN 978-86-7148-251-6

scientific monograph of national importance

In the first chapter entitled „Money in the Law and Monetary Sovereignty“, the author points out the need for a legal definition of the term of money, with particular emphasis on the postulates of social, state and institutional theory of money. Below is the structure of monetary sovereignty, especially its early development in the Roman monetary law, the sophisticated nature, legal, economic and other limitations of its implementation in practice, as a phenomenon of erosion and evolution in monetary unions.

In the second chapter entitled „The Axiology and Justification of International Monetary Law“, the author points to the subject of studying international monetary law, classification, sources and the scope of the principles of lex monetae and lex contractus in international monetary relations. The role of the International Monetary Law Committee and the new wave in the development of international monetary law is particularly analysed, i.e. the tendency of hybridisation that is perceived in relation to international economic and international financial law.

In the third chapter entitled „The Subjects of International Monetary Law“, the author analyse the operation of the monetary entity (agent) in a global context (the International Monetary Fund, from its creation, competencies, special drawing rights, special institutions, places in the global financial management system and the implications of its competence in the protection of human rights) and the European context (the structure of the European System of Central Banks, the single monetary policy strategy and the competencies of the European Central Bank). In this section, attention also is paid to the role of the European Court of Justice in resolving monetary disputes, starting from the classical, through the contemporary approach to the other types of interventions with importance for the international monetary order.

In the fourth chapter entitled „Public Debt Management in the Light of International Monetary Relations“, the author deals with the concept of public debt in contemporary monetary law, the principles of borrowing, the problem of registering the odious public debt and the process of debt restructuring.

In the fifth chapter entitled „Legal Mechanisms for Economic Policy Coordination as a Prerequisite for the Effective Implementation of European Monetary Law“, the author argues and thoroughly deals with the issues of coordination of economic policy, while in the sixth chapter entitled „Regulatory Framework of International Monetary Law in the Conditions of the Global Financial Crisis: New Tendencies“, the author considers the role of the currency transaction taxes in international monetary traffic, its elements and the relationship with the policy of mandatory reserves.

Law of the European Central Bank, *scientific monograph of national importance, Niš: Center for Publication 2023 (354 p.) ISBN 978-86-7148-300-1

In the first chapter entitled "The Law of the European Central Bank as an Independent Legal Discipline", the subject and concept of the study of the legal regulation of monetary activity of the ECB, monetary stability as a cause of the norms of ECB law and the application of the concept of common interests of humanity in the valid axiology of ECB law are pointed out.

In the second chapter, entitled "Organizational Structure of the European Central Bank and its Legal Subjectivity (Then and Now)", the development path of the ECB as a community institution, its organizational structure, as well as the concept of its classic and modern competencies in the public monetary management of the EU are discussed. In particular, its competencies within the concept of the banking union are analyzed, where the mechanism of participation of non-eurozone countries in the single recovery mechanism, the institution of close cooperation within the single supervisory mechanism, as well as the legal nature of the memorandum of understanding and the position of the ECB in providing financial assistance, are analyzed. Also, the subject of in-depth analysis is the activities of the ECB in suppressing financial crime and preventing the financing of international terrorism, as well as a comprehensive overview of the need to regulate and issue digital money by central banks.

In the third part, entitled "The Legal Position of the European Central Bank in Contemporary Social Conditions", the concept and characteristics of monetary disputes in EU law are indicated, through the determination and identification of compensation for the liability of central banks, the advantages, and benefits of judicial vs. arbitration settlement of disputes, as well as jurisdiction of the ECB in the practice of the German Federal Constitutional Court. In this part, the impact of negative social populism on the outcomes of current disputes is analyzed in detail, and a comparative legal overview of the competencies of the ECB and the FED is given to note similarities and differences. Also, below, the importance of the institution of the European Ombudsman for the work of the European Central Bank is pointed out.

In the fourth part, entitled "Green Central Banking in the Monetary Law of the EU", the issue of sustainable economic development in the monetary policy of the EU is investigated and the contribution of the ECB in the area of environmental protection through the so-called greening of monetary legislation, the ecological dimension of the ECB mandate and a functional overview of the tasks and objectives of the structure of the green network of central banks in the preservation of natural resources.

In the fifth part, entitled "European Monetary Management and Cohesion Policies: ECB and Human rights", the social component of the ECB's competence is subjected to analysis; where the functional independence of the ECB is indicated as a prerequisite for social cohesion in the EMU.
